Obamination

There has been a lot of controversy surrounding the scandal of the Obama White House. This is not an easy topic to discuss, and there are many angles to consider. However, one common thread that seems to emerge is the notion that President Obama’s actions are somehow inconsistent with his campaign promises. In this article, we will explore some of the key issues that have arisen since the scandal broke, and examine whether or not President Obama has been able to deliver on his promises.

Republicans should jettison the campaign theme, by the way, and get back to the basics of the President and his people. It seems to me that the President had a lot of people around him who were trying to do their best, but they were not up to the task. It is true that there have been some problems in the White House, but it is clear that these problems were created by the President himself. It is time for Republicans to take over the reins and start working towards a more effective and efficient government.

Obamination

Recent revelations about President Obama’s role in the scandal have been catastrophic for his administration. It is clear that the President has been involved in some way, and it is time for him to take responsibility for his actions. The American people deserve to know the truth, and it is up to the President to provide that information. It is time for President Obama to step down and allow someone else to take over and start a new chapter for America.

Lewish M. Obama’s mystery night

On “Fox News Sunday” last Sunday, White House side Dan Pfeiffer was asked about President Obama’s mysterious night on the 2nd of April, and whether or not he had any knowledge of the scandal involving the White House.

“Obama was in the Situation Room, looking over the situation with a group of military leaders,” Pfeiffer said. “He was very concerned about the situation and wanted to make sure that the right decisions were being made.”

Obama’s schedule for that night is not known publicly, but sources close to the White House have confirmed that he was in the Situation Room.
